VERNON (Staff)—More than 50 hard-minded officials, including representatives from civic and provincial governments today left Vernon on the last lap of their B.C. promotional tour before visiting Alberta for a one-week stay.

The tour left Vancouver Sunday by bus and gathered snowmobiles climbed aboard from the Fraser Valley, Keremeos, Penticton and Vernon. Kelowna delegates joined the tour in Vernon and more will join in Kamloops and Revelstoke.

Included are: W. Worley of the C.I.B. FORT SIMPSON. N.W.T.—(CP)—A skeleton force in this flooded town kept eyes open and fingers crossed today as the mighty Mackenzie River showed signs of breaking up.

If down stream ice goes out, residents who evacuated this centre 600 miles north of Edmonton can continue with plans to return to help with the cleanup.

But if the ice first goes out above the town this settlement of 750 and the two-mile long island it sits upon could be entirely flooded.

Fort Simpson lies at the confluence of the Mackenzie and Liard rivers. The floods here were at their first time since 1936 when ice on the Mackenzie blocked the spring thaw of the northward flowing Liard. It swept through the town, dumping ice 20 feet high on the main street.

All residents were evacuated. A task force of 12 men, including town administrator S. Hancock, spent Sunday night on the island. Should danger threaten a siren will be sounded and an air force helicopter will whisk the men to safety.

CAIRO — Naval frogmen today began searching for bodies trapped under the capsized hull of a ferry boat which sank in the Nile River Saturday, drowning some 200 persons.

The exact toll was not immediately known. The Associated Press placed it at 210 while Reuters news agency said at least 173 had died. As the search continued today the Middle East news agency said 105 bodies had been found.

BUEA, Cameroon (Reuters)—An American diplomatic courier Joseph P. Capozzi of New York today was fighting for his life in Buea Hospital, the only survivor of a plane crash on Mount Cameroon Saturday in which 34 persons died.

The United States consulate official in Buea said Capozzi suffered three fractures and internal injuries, and had a 50-per-cent chance of survival.

Rescuers who hacked their way through jungle to the spot where the Douglas C-47s Lagos Dec 6 flight plunged into the bush, said they found three survivors.

One died almost immediately and another died while being carried out to Buea, 40 miles from Douala, by stretcher.

Thirteen bodies had been brought to Buea today by a 4-man rescue team headed by French doctor The team took 11 hours to cut a trail through thick jungle to the crash scene.

The 14 passengers—about 100 were believed to include head Dagnon of Dahomey, a member of the Afro-Malagasy union of 13 French-speaking African states. No other passengers or members of the crew of seven were identified.

SERVING THE OKANAGAN — CANADA'S FRUIT BOWL

A sportsman has spelled out what sportsmen's wives have known for a long time—hunting and fishing, like crime, doesn't pay.

Philip Haverslock of Chapman Camp, B.C. broke the news to delegates to the annual convention of the British Columbia Federation of Fish and Game Clubs in Vernon.

Based on a statistical study and answers to a questionnaire sent affiliated clubs, he found:

The average member has $848 invested in equipment and spends $270 a year plus $11 for licences to bring home about $98 worth of meat.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics says the Canadian average expenditure in hunting and fishing is $180 a year.

Mr. Haverslock even had regional breakdowns:

Quebec—the average sportsman spends $190 a year, has $900 worth of equipment and takes home game worth $102.

Kimberley—he spends about $130 more in licences and, the best being equal, brings home $180 worth of meat.

Kelowna—annual outlay $125, equipment $200, reward $25 worth of meat.

MONTREAL (CP) — An autopsy has shown that prison guard Raymond Teller was killed by bullets fired by his would-be rescuers and not by knife wounds during a melee at St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary last week.

Prison official had no immediate comment on the autopsy findings. A statement probably will be issued Tuesday, one spokesman said.

Teller was grabbed by two prisoners and held while they demanded that they be transferred to another prison. He was slashed and stabbed while he was being held.

Prison guards charged the cell where he was being held, opening fire with pistols as they moved in.

One of the prisoners, Marcel Marcoux, 34, was killed and his cousin Claude, 21, was wounded.

It was announced Thursday night that Teller, 35-year-old father of three, had died from the slashes and stab wounds.

SHOT FOUR TIMES

A morgue official said today the autopsy showed that he had been hit four times by bullets, twice in the heart, once in the head and once in the shoulder.

The autopsy report said he might have died in any event from a stab wound that pierced his lung.

An inquest into Teller's death and the shooting of Marcoux was to resume shortly. It was started last week but adjourned after the bodies were formally identified.

Warden Michel Lecorre said "a feeling of extreme tension has built up among the prisoners since the incident. A staff of 20 members of the RCMP and Quebec Provincial Police were called to the penitentiary to help maintain order.

The Dominican government sent thousands more troops to the Haitian border today for a possible invasion of the neighboring Negro republic, government sources reported.

President Juan Bosch was reported ready to order the invasion at the slightest provocation from Haiti. The two countries have been at odds for more than a week over Haitian refugees who have fled in foreign embassies in Port au Prince, the Haitian capital.

The sources said Dominican air force planes were flying patrols along the border and that navy vessels had linked up with

Aid For Flood-Hit Areas Planned Soon By Ottawa

FORT SMITH, N.W.T. (CP)—The federal cabinet will decide this week what assistance it will give to northern communities hit by flood waters and massive ice.

Northern Affairs Minister Arthur Laing said the work of restoring Hay River, N.W.T., and Fort Simpson, N.W.T., and 625 miles north of Edmonton, respectively, will begin as soon as flood waters recede.

He said claims for damage in the hard-hit town of Hay River will be paid by the federal government when approved by a two-thirds of the estimated value of property in the town of 1,800. S. W. Hancock, Fort Simpson administrator, estimated damage in his centre at more than $750,000.

A trailer camp will be established near Hay River and 50 trailers moved in by the federal government this week. Flood victims evacuated from the settlement will begin to return by Wednesday.

SET UP TENTS
Tents will be set up at Fort Simpson to enable residents evacuated by air last week to return to the region by the end of the week.

About 1,600 residents have been evacuated from the towns. Ice on Great Slave Lake held back the spring thaw on the northward-flowing Hay River and tons of ice and billions of gallons of water swept across a delta-shaped island at the mouth of the river upon which the town was built.

At its worst the waters rose 30 feet above normal. It now has receded but in its wake floating sewage from cesspools has created a health hazard.

More than 1,100 doses of typhoid vaccine were given in Hay River and an area five miles around the town was placed under quarantine.

No person will be permitted to enter or leave the quarantined area without permission.

CLEAR THE AREA

The federal government said Saturday it would move out all but essential people from the team of assessors. About 50 homes destroyed or damaged in Fort Simpson will be repaired or restored on high ground.

The minister estimated damage at Hay River at $1,600,000. Flooded sections of Hay River, Mr. Laing said a study will be made to determine whether relocation of Hay River, a key distribution centre in the region, would be desirable and, if so, what cost would be involved.

Mayor W. R. McBryan of Hay River said he was satisfied with the federal government's planned assistance program. Early Sunday a skeleton task force found the water level unchanged at Fort Simpson. More than a third of the town still was under water.

The community was hit when ice on the mighty Mackenzie, more than 1,000 miles long and key to the Mackenzie River system, backed up the run off from the Liard, one of its main tributaries.

First tents to be established at Fort Simpson were taken in by RCAF aircraft Sunday. Mr. Laing said the emergency would be over sooner at Fort Simpson than at Hay River and the tents would not be needed for more than a week or two.

Temperatures in the regions ranged between 40 and 50 degrees Sunday, but there was no indication when the Mackenzie would break up. The sky was clear and there was little wind. School was to begin for evacuated youngsters at Fort Smith today.

Aklavik is more than 400 miles down stream from Fort Simpson and 1,600 miles north-west of Edmonton.

Westside Water Proposal Killed

WESTBANK—A proposal that ferring again to the expansion of Westbank's domestic water supply. The engineering report, compiled by Associated Engineers, has been branded "economically impossible" in an engineers' report.

The proposal, originated by Maurice Chaplin, was presented to the Westbank Waterworks District trustees as an alternative plan to the recently approved domestic water supply expansion program.

Mr. Chaplin claimed a line serving both domestic and irrigation water requirements would last at least 40 years, and maintenance problems would be minimal as compared to maintenance on a mechanical pump system as required by the approved expansion program.

Under his plan, some 1,500 acres of land not now served by water, could be reached, Mr. Chaplin said.

He claimed such a system irrigation system, as the one would assure Westbank of one of the best water systems in the Okanagan.

"Water runs downhill, so why pump it uphill?" he asked, re-

Permits Show Number Hike But Value Down For April

Although the number of building permits for April 1963 is up, compared to April 1962, the value is down from $309,316 last year, to $283,163 for this year.

This April's total is second highest since 1953.

For a new industrial building, a permit was issued for $2,500. One permit for $200 was given for alterations to industrial buildings. For alterations to institutional buildings, one permit for $6,700 was issued. The three permits totalled $9,400.

Two permits were issued for new commercial buildings. Value was $350. Six permits valued at $9,719 were issued for alterations to commercial buildings.

World Affairs Appear About To Shift Again

During the next few months the world will probably see a very considerable change in world personalities and, with the changing faces, changes in world politics of many countries.

Mr. Khrushchev has hinted that he is getting on in age and is about ready to retire. Mr. Adenauer is to step out in October as West German Chancellor. Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain will have to face the elections this year or next and there are signs that the long Conservative rule will be terminated. Mr. Pearson has taken over in Canada. These things seem to indicate that the tides in world affairs appear once again about to shift.

Kozlov, or whoever moves up in Russia, will probably tend to be more parochial, more tied up with home problems, which are increasingly demanding attention. In West Germany, I think will probably move closer to Britain and the United States, and will be less inclined to listen to De Gaulle of France, than Adenauer has been. Wilson, if he should take over for Labor in Britain, will be cool to Western Europe and look more toward Russia, but at the same time trying to be friendly with the United States. Canada, under Pearson, will probably work more closely with both Britain and the United States.

Beyond all this, there is the assumption that the Vatican, which does play an important part in world affairs, is to explore the possibility of co-existence with Communism. Things indeed are definitely in a state of flux.

However, Mao Tse-tung is still in the saddle in Red China and is stretching his muscles. De Gaulle, unless something unexpected happens, will run France for another three years, but the indications are he will be more isolated than he has been. In Cuba, Castro must be wondering whether he goes if Khrushchev should depart, as Russia may not always be willing to pay for the bolstering of Castro's regime.

In the United States, Kennedy appears to be heading for re-election and will thus have six more years in office. Probably it is Kennedy who will shape the course of things to come more than any other leader now on the scene.

These things suggest that in the next few years the world will be a less dangerous place than it has been in the past decade. If Russia turns her principal activities inward, world tension will lessen, although it may be expected that the Communists will go on nibbling, stirring guerrilla warfare or local wars, putting pressure on Berlin and fomenting trouble in Africa and South America. Castro too, will remain a thorn in the side of the United States. China, without full co-operation from the Soviet, is unlikely to attempt a major war.

The changing faces will bring changing policies and, at the moment, it would seem that the new policies would tend to lessen the tension in the world.

House Building Active

Residential building in Kelowna, according to figures of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, was more active in the first three months of the year than in any other city in British Columbia, excluding Vancouver Metro and Victoria Metro.

Construction starts in Kelowna during the three months numbered 58. The next highest was Nanaimo with 13. Adjacent interior figures show Kamloops with eight, North Kamloops 20, Penticton 15 and Vernon 10. There were no housing starts in either Trail or Nelson during the three month period.

In Kelowna city at the end of March there were 106 houses under construction. North Kamloops was second with 75. Other interior cities showed: Kamloops 22; Penticton 28; Vernon 29. There were none under construction in either Trail or Nelson.

The figures quoted only include the construction within the city boundaries.

Grubby No More

Cleaner living habits of the British present some businesses with a peck of trouble.

That's the conclusion to be drawn from the plight of T. Gerrard and Co. of Britain. At the moment the firm is badly in need of 5,000 human lice to supply the needs of medical, veterinary and biological teaching institutions.

But a good louse is hard to find in an increasingly hygienic Old England and Gerrard and Co. now apparently have to ante up an inflationary ninepence per.

Once bedbugs by the thousand could be found in many of the old houses of London. But now the firm claims it has to wait for the rare cat from a local health office to announce that a house has been found harboring the beasts.

Even the British dog has apparently succumbed to the sanitary life. There's a scarcity of tapeworms for Gerrard and Co.

But the company demonstrates true British resourcefulness. It's now breeding the bedbugs and importing the worms from Hong Kong. — Financial Post.

Centuries Of Suffering But Little To Show For It

TOKYO (AP) — Few nations have endured so much and have so little to show for it. Not many face such a bleak future.

After centuries of bloodshed and turmoil, hunger and repression, this seems to be South Korea's story—painful past and no end in sight.

South Korea today wallows in an almost medieval political and economic morass.

In Seoul, the capital, military rulers in big cars speed past sweating, straining men harnessed like oxen to creaking carts filled with coal.

In the countryside, spring winds whip brown dust across treeless hills almost barren of the signs of industrial progress being displayed in other Asian lands.

In the villages, there is dawn-to-dusk labor followed by fervent prayer for a good rice crop—the difference between life and death.

An immensely expensive effort by the United States has failed to shape South Korea into a stable, democratic and economically progressive country.

The United States shed the blood of its youth, poured in billions of dollars, assigned some of its most dedicated diplomats, economists and soldiers to South Korea.

Many Americans are becoming impatient with the seeming inability of 26,000,000 South Koreans to stop internal political squabbling, put their house in order and attack a heritage of economic and political ills passed down through the ages.

This heritage results from a quirk of geography that hooked the northern end of the 525-mile Korean peninsula to the Asian mainland and placed the southern end within easy sailing distance of Japan.

DIVIDED BY WAR

Mongols, Manchus and Russians moved south in devastating waves to conquer or control in ancient times. Japanese attacked from the south. The Second World War left the country divided, with Communists holding everything north of the 38th parallel.

The 1950-53 Korean War was only one more battle for control of the strategic peninsula.

Three years of war also devastated the land again, wiping out the enormous U.S. economic program that began after the Second World War when Washington somewhat unwillingly became South Korea's financial patron rather than let it slip into communism.

That dollar investment, for both economic and military aid, now totals $3,400,000,000. It has without doubt saved South Korea from complete collapse but has not moved the nation toward economic or political stability.

LACKS RESOURCES

South Korea is an impoverished land, lacking natural resources and cadres of trained economists or industrial managers to run the factories U.S. dollars build.

Army generals more noted for political reliability and zeal than understanding of economic principles are writing South Korea's economic policy—often with disastrous results. Colonels are running fertilizer plants.

Tremendous sums are spent to maintain the 600,000-man armed forces, among the biggest and best-trained in all of non-Communist Asia.

South Korea since the Second World War has been one big political free-for-all, with the outgroups constantly trying to unseat the ins. The ins have been marked by inefficiency and corruption, the outs with lust for power.

University students have toppled one government since 1948, military officers another. Neither group of revolutionaries has demonstrated any real understanding of how a democracy works.

U.S. policy so far has been vacillate make clear will be cut unless this happens.

South Korea's military rulers feel the United States cannot publicly urge progress toward democratic rule and withdrawal from South Korea. They know the strategic value of their peninsula in cold war terms.

WOMEN FAIL MOST

MONTREAL (CP) — Mary Louise Lynch, only woman member of the National Parole Board, told a group of women here there are twice as many parole failures among women as among men in Canadian prisons. Experts thought the reason was the high percentage of women in federal prisons on drug charges. Three out of four to 65 per cent of all women in Canadian penitentiaries.

OTTAWA REPORT

It Couldn't Occur Here

By PATRICK HUBBARD

Joseph Thorson, the 16-year-old president of our exchange corps, was recently held up by bandits while holidaying in turbulent South America. He was foolish enough to resist the highway robbers, and for his courage received a wound serious enough to prevent him from plunging into our recent election as a candidate.

This may sound odd, but Justice Thorson was a minister in Sir Mackenzie King's cabinet more than 20 years ago, and with enthusiastic resignation from the bench a proponent of his 15th birthday, he received a slightly premature retirement and a re-entry into the political fray.

Ottawa was severely shocked to learn of this lawless misadventure before the well-known Ottawa judge. Such things could never happen here, he deduced the old wise man.

In contrast to the placidity of Ottawa, the Canadian placidity of Ottawa one might say, just imagine how dangerous life is elsewhere.

I have told you about tourist Thorson, held up at a pistol-point while photographing the Ave. Now consider these newspaper headlines:

"Police busy tracking down bomb scares."

"Teenage gangs, terrorize women pedestrians."

"Police probe gang slayings."

"Dynamite found, bomb scare in city."

"Suspect in boy's death."

The details are even worse than the headlines.

CONTEMPT FOR LAW

The first headlines related to police emergency squads investigating seven threats of bomb blasts within 12 hours.

The second described three gangs of youths, attacking passers-by, especially women, snatching their handbags, and racing away. Some of their victims were tourists, like Judge Thorson, who had landed from a passing ship to visit the shops.

The third headline referred to a command-type raid by 70 youths, transported in eight automobiles, and armed with shotguns, burst into a store, the owner, a young man, fled, and the store was looted. The youths were able to resist their own gang to meet the assault.

The dead boy was the victim of a robbery, caused in a fight with school companions. The loot of dynamite amounted to a sack of 200 dollars and 100 sticks of explosives.

RIGHT HERE, AT HOME

Was this another page in the life of South America?

No. Every one of these stories was to be read in a recent issue of the Chronicle-Telegraph of Quebec City, and related to the everyday life of happenings in that city.

Asked about this growing crime wave by teen-age boys and young men, senior RCMP officials here point out that Canada is suffering from a growing contempt for the law and for law-enforcement officers. This is not helped by the lenient sentences being handed down by some benches.

The cause? It is largely a by-product of unemployment, which is disproportionately heavy among teen-agers, and leaves them with nothing to do all day long and an urge to compensate by doing themselves appear important.

Superimposed upon this situation—which is nationwide and by no means unusual in Quebec City—there is also the violence being attributed to French-Canadian extremists in the nationalist movement.

The individual crimes themselves are bad. But far worse, in the opinion of senior police officers, is the increasing mood of disrespect for the law. Those old enough to remember disrespect for the prohibition law in U.S.A. also remember how that disrespect paved the way for the advent of widespread organized crime.

It could happen here.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Vitamin C Has Alias

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Ascorbic acid seems to be finding its way more and more into vitamin pill, etc., and some of my friends are saying, "I haven't had a cold since I started taking it."

What about overdoses? Is it harmful in any way? Does it mix with food, starches, fruits or sleeping pills?—R.R.

To All Readers: Don't jump to hasty conclusions before completing another letter which is quoted below.

But first, a word concerning our topic. Ascorbic acid isn't added to vitamins. It IS one. It is another name for Vitamin C, such as we get from citrus fruits and vegetables. There is even some in meats such as liver and kidney.

It is NOT a preventive for colds, but it IS important to total body health. It helps to keep the capillaries (tiny blood vessels) healthy, aids in red blood cell formation and in the healing of wounds and bruises. It is also valuable to bone structure and teeth.

Years ago a British naval doctor found that lime juice from a citrus fruit prevented scurvy on long sea voyages. The reason was that scurvy resulted from lack of ascorbic acid.

Having enough is one thing. Taking overdoses in the hope of preventing colds is nonsense. Overdose don't cause harm but they are wasteful. If you get more than you need, the body discharges it.

Although the ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) functions may protect, the evidence denies that extra doses prevent colds. And here's a letter received the same day as the foregoing one:

Dear Doctor: I used to have frequent colds and flu. I started taking vitamins. For several years I got by with very few colds and am still taking vitamins, but the last two years

I've had lots of colds again. Have you any explanation? — L.L.

Yes, I have. Vitamins aren't medicine. They aren't a cold preventive.

Vitamins, being necessary to health, support our general vigor and resistance.

Colds, however, and flu, are virus infections. There may be several hundred varieties. As we are exposed in them, we build up immunities to varying degree.

We may be unlucky and have a succession of colds, but we also gain protection against these particular viruses and fight them off the next time they come around. If the same ones prevail again.

Vitamins don't prevent colds, although they all do contribute vitally to our general health.

If we've had a lot of colds, we have built up some immunities. If we then "take something," vitamins or whatnot, and have fewer colds, we give all the credit to whatever we took.

We forget to give any credit to the colds we have recently had.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband and I are expecting our first baby. We both have blue eyes but are hoping for a brown-eyed child. Is this possible? — C.D.

Possible? Yes, likely? No. What about the baby's grandparents and great-grandparents? A few brown-eyed ones would indicate a chance. Complete lack among the ancestors means virtually no chance of a brown-eyed baby. (At birth all Caucasian babies' eyes are blue or violet; other colors appear later, if at all.)

Note to H.G.: No, I do not know of any progress toward solving the difficulty when the nerve of the ear is dead.

Another Stage In Big Dispute

OTTAWA (CP) — The public recriminations between a Liberal cabinet minister and a former Conservative minister last week were another stage in a long-standing dispute over appointments to government boards and commissions.

Each new administration finds from time to time that jobs, many of them currying favorable salaries, become vacant through expiration of the term of appointment of a man placed there by a previous administration.

Generally the jobs are on the tariff board, the National Energy Board, the war veterans allowance board or the Canadian pension commission, to mention only a few of the bodies where the cabinet makes appointments without holding public competition open to all.

When one government replaces a man appointed by a previous administration the result often is an outcry implying that the out-going appointee was sacrificed to political favoritism.

This week's case of Ken MacKay's departure from the pension commission, which involved Veterans Minister Roger Tillet and former defence minister Churchill in a public dispute, was just one instance.

The Conservatives came under similar fire last fall over two Liberal appointments to the restrictive trade practices commission—C. Rhodes Smith and A. S. Whiteley.

A number of Liberals have made no secret of their intention to try to have the appointment of a tariff board member revoked. The man involved is A. Dett, McPhillips, Conservative MP from 1957 until 1962 who was named to the board by the Conservative cabinet in March after failing to win the Conservative nomination in Victoria (B.C.) constituency for the April 8 general election.

The Liberal argument is that the Conservatives, having lost votes of confidence in the Commons, had no right during an election campaign to appoint a man to the tariff board, one of the most powerful governmental bodies.

Normally civil service jobs are open to all by competitive examination conducted by the civil service commission. When the commission was established, the object was to remove from the area of political patronage jobs in the public service.

But over the years new boards, commissions and the like, many of them with a vital impact on the business and cultural life of the country, have been established by acts of Parliament which empower the cabinet to appoint members and high officers without competitive examination.

The candidates for such posts often are open to known to the public and are open to Parliament for the commission of bond men whom the minister considers best qualified for the job.

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Macmillan, who has been working in a borrowed office for the last 2½ years, must wait several more months before he can move back to his official headquarters.

The renovation of 10 Downing Street, the historic home of British prime ministers, will not be completed until this August, a year later than original estimates for the job.

But when the ground of scaffolding is removed from the 17th century building and the workmen finally pack up their tools, the building will have been completely remodeled from the foundation to the attic. 35-ton Douglas fir roof beams from Canada.

DOOR UNCHANGED

Only the front door, which has not fitted its frame for many years, will remain as before. But the architect in charge of the reconstruction, Raymond Luth, has tried to maintain the historic character of the building, especially the facade.

"There was a great need for pulling it down," he said. "If it had been an ordinary office block, it would certainly have come down. But of course there is history to consider."

The residence and its neighbors at Downing Street, home of the chancellor of the exchequer, and 12 of the offices of the government whip, were once part of a square of dwelling houses built as a speculation effort by Sir George Downing.

They were "less substantial" in construction than other dwellings of the time.

ANN LANDERS

Not Home Free Yet!

Dear Ann Landers: So it's the woman who pays, is it? Not always.

In 1962 my salary was $25,000 plus a generous bonus. In 1963 I will make $13,000 after several months of unemployment in Chicago—and then only due to the loyalty of an old friend who is also a disgraced ex-convict from New York.

The reason? A woman who accepted luxuries, love, and swore she'd wait forever for God to free him so they could marry and enjoy their love publicly.

After two years she changed her mind and insisted he get a divorce and marry her or she would ruin him. He refused. The woman then set out harassing him at home with telephone calls at all hours of the night, does not leave the house, and has gathered every scrap of his life, from his high school days to the two years of prison, notes, letters and a book she has written about him. She has even taken it over to the prison of the company. He just has to live with that.

The woman has been promoted in the firm and is doing better than ever. And the word is around that she is now the mistress of another executive.

The woman pays? Not always. —FOOL.

Dear Fool: You got yours double in spades. But what makes you think she is home free?

The jury is still out on that doll. Check her in about five years if she's still around, that is.

Dear Ann Landers: I am the mother of three pre-teens who follow your column closely. You make a lot of sense most of the time, but your views on a young steady need clarifying.

The phrase "going steady" does not mean one must think the other is a "going steady" and stay with him or her for the rest of their lives. When I was 15, I was "going steady" to a boy who was 17. We had a very good relationship, but we both went on to college and got married. Today, I can tell you the boy girl combination that works best is that which

The most nerve-shredding example I can give you occurred yesterday. Our 10-year-old daughter, Dora, came home from school and announced that she and Freddie, the freckled faced kid, also age 10, who lives next door are "going steady."

I was shocked at this statement, and asked, "What do you mean, going steady?—Where do you GO?"

Dora replied, "Oh, we don't really go any place, mother. He just sits in the living room."

I hope I've made my point. —DAVENPORT MOTHER.

Dear Mother: From the months of lather, "Some married people believe the same way."

Tribute Paid To Kelowna Man Whose Career Ended By Injury

But there were others who received injuries and were not able to continue their hockey careers. One of them is living right here in Kelowna. He is Pete Doherty, one of the greatest defencemen ever to play in the WHL. He was severely injured and his playing career was ended.

Pete was the toughest hockey player I have ever known. He weighed only 135 pounds but he was rugged and everyone on the ice had to answer to him.

Mighty Mackenzie Gives Word
"I'm Still Boss Of North"

EDMONTON (C.P.) — The mighty Mackenzie River system served notice last week it still is boss in the north.

Flowing from its winter slumber by spring sunshine and long, warm days, it hurled tons of ice and billions of gallons of water into two small island settlements—Hay River, N.W.T., and Fort Simpson, N.W.T., 500 and 625 miles north of Edmonton, respectively.

By the weekend more than 1,400 residents of the towns, most of them women and children, were afflicted by Yellowknife, N.W.T., 600 miles north of Edmonton, and Fort Smith, N.W.T., 200 miles farther south.

Floods are commonplace along the system because the major tributaries—the Liard, the Peace, the Slave, the Athabasca—have their headwaters in the south and flow northward.

Springtime is almost a month behind in the north and the spring thaw run off is backed up by the ice downstream.

But, said an official of the northern chamber of mines, "most of the floods are not serious and seldom give much trouble."

He added floods at one centre does not mean there will be a chain of floods downstream.

Both Hay River and Fort Simpson are built on islands vulnerable to the whims of the system. Ice on Great Slave Lake held back the Hay River break up and tons of ice and water were forced through the town at the mouth of the river. It was the worst flood in memory and the first severe inundation since 1956.

Ice on the Mackenzie held back the spring thaw on the Liard and Fort Simpson, on a two-mile-long island at the confluence of the rivers, was inundated for the first time since 1936.

The Mackenzie River system is 2,514 miles, second only to the Mississippi in North America. Its basin stretches as far west as the Rockies in northern B.C., and as far east as the Laurentian Plateau.

Its watershed is 500 miles wide and more than 1,000 miles long.

The area is rich in minerals—the chief attraction for recent development—fur, lumber, oil and fish.

New highways and railroads have pushed back the frontier to Hay River and Yellowknife. This has diminished barge traffic along the Mackenzie—called the main street of the north.

Scattered along its vast reaches and dotting the shores of three great lakes are numerous settlements with colorful names—Arctic Red River, Fort Good Hope, Aklavik, Wrigley, Fort Norman, Norman Wells.

LARGEST IN SOUTH

The largest are in the south and include McMurray, Alta., 180 miles northeast of Edmonton and site of the famed Athabasca oil sands with known oil reserves of 500,000,000 barrels of oil.

Other prime industrial areas include:

Finlay Forks, B.C., 450 miles northwest of Edmonton, is the scene of a giant, multi-million dollar hydro development in an area rich in minerals.

Puget, 60 miles east of Hay River, with vast deposits of lead and zinc. A railway now is under construction north from Peace River, Alta., to tap them.

Cassiar, B.C., on the Liard River near the B.C.-Yukon border, has a vast asbestos industry, while 800 miles northwest of Edmonton Canada Tungsten has started work on a multi-million dollar development.

1 ♦ 2 ♣ 3 ♠ 4 ♠

2 NT Pass 4 ♠ Pass

4 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass

4 NT Pass 5 ♠ Pass

5 NT Pass 6 ♠ Pass

This hand occurred during the famous Lenz-Culbertson match in 1931.

Mrs. Culbertson was South and opened the bidding with a diamond. Oswald Jacoby was West and made a weak jump overcall of two hearts. Ely Culbertson (North) bid three spades, and Sidney Lenz (East) passed.

Mrs. Culbertson now bid three notrump. This might have been regarded as the right bid in those days, but surely, by modern standards, the better rebid at this point would be four diamonds. Hands divided 6-4-2-1 are hardly the notrump type, and to this extent the three notrump bid was misleading, but beyond that there was also the misrepresentation of high-card strength with a hand containing potential slam possibilities opposite a jump-shift.

Culbertson bid four clubs and now Mrs. Culbertson rebid her diamonds. Eventually, following a cuebid in hearts, Mrs. Culbertson became declarer at six diamonds. It was an unsound contract, of course, but nevertheless, it had some chance of success, depending upon the opening lead.

Jacoby had no clear-cut lead. The Culbertsons had bid all four suits and it was by no means obvious where it would be best to attack. It seemed to him there was a good chance that Culbertson had the A-Q of spades for the three spade bid, and that the all-around finesse would trap his king.

So Jacoby decided to put Mrs. Culbertson under immediate pressure by leading a spade in the hope of forestalling the finesse. Jacoby thought Mrs. Culbertson might read the lead as a singleton and go up with the ace.

The plan succeeded beyond his wildest dreams. Lenz took the six of spades with the ace and returned a spade, thus defeating the contract a trick.

If Jacoby had led any other suit, Mrs. Culbertson would have made all thirteen tricks!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SOME ADVERSE aspects indicate a need for caution now. Be careful in personal relationships and do nothing to antagonize either friend or foe. Be cautious in financial matters, too. Haste or carelessness could result in needless loss.

FOR THE BIRTHDAY

If tomorrow is your birthday, your horoscope indicates that you soon will enter a period in which past efforts, both occupational and financial, should pay off well. Good monetary breaks are due to occur in mid-June, mid-August, late November and early December and job and/or business interests are due for big boosts in October and December. You will have to make the best use of opportunities to earn these advances, however.

Chances for travel, and some unexpected social contacts, may broaden your horizons in July, November and/or December, and, if you are engaged in creative or scientific work, June and July should prove highly inspirational. Recognition of your talents in this connection may not come immediately, but it will eventually—possibly late in September. Avoid extravagance and/or speculation in mid-June and mid-September, and do nothing to invite domestic friction late this month or in August.

A child born on this day will be gentle, sensitive and endowed with a great sense of justice.

GARNET MARKS (l) AND N. T. HAUGOM (r) INSPECT A NEW MERCEDES-BENZ

TWO COMPANIES HAVE SAME HEADQUARTERS

Ex - Air Force Men Run Gemco

Garnet Marks and N. T. Haugom are directors of Gemco and Gemaco in Kelowna. The Gemco registered office is in the Gemco building at 991 Ellis St., but the two companies are entirely different. Gemco is the industrial equipment firm while Gemaco is the Kelowna agent for Mercedes-Benz.
Mr. Marks was born in Crookwell, Australia, and attended school there and in Sydney. With the coming of World War II, he joined the Australian Air Force. Following the war, he spent three years with a tractor company in Australia.
In 1948, Mr. Marks went to Toronto and was employed by a tractor firm there for two years. He went to Vancouver for one and a half years before coming to Kelowna in 1952 to open a branch office for the tractor firm he worked for in Vancouver.
In 1955, Mr. Marks and Mr. Haugom formed Gemco Equipment Ltd.
In 1958, Gemco bought a diesel car to cut road costs.

The saving was so amazing, the pair decided to become representatives for Mercedes-Benz.
Since then they have sold 100 cars, covering the entire Mercedes range except the $15,000 sports car.
Mr. Haugom was born in North Vancouver and attended school in New Westminster and Vancouver. He joined the RCAF for three and a half years and returned to school. He graduated from UBC with his BSA (Bachelor of Science in Agriculture).
Mr. Haugom spent the next five years working for an equipment company in Vancouver and then running a company branch in Chilliwack.
The Gemaco location has been changed to 991 Ellis St. but the firm still offers full parts, sales and service.
Mr. Marks has two boys, Jay, 9 and Tracy, 6. Mr. Haugom is the father of one boy, Howard, 6, and a girl, Ellen, 2.
They both belong to the senior chamber of commerce and are members of the Kelowna Pistol Club. Mr. Marks also belongs to the Kelowna Rotary Club.
